[Laughter.] The swindle commenced by laying the rails down on the top of the grass and waiting for the wash of the rains to do the grading, [laughter.] so as to swindle the State out of five infillions of bonds. [That's so.] The swindle is on the tax-payers. They made an abortion of the enterprise in order to swindle the State out of six hundred thousand acres of land. [That's so.] The road was never built. It growed like Topsy. [Laughter.] It is a swindle on the freighters—charging more than any other road in the land, with no accommodation. The merchants have to pay across Missouri, two hundred and six miles, one-third the whole freight to Boston. That is where the swindle comes in. It is also a swindle on the people of St. Joseph. Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 4th, 1866. Editors Intelligencer: Quite natural, (at least I will say it was,) I almost forgot you during the Holidays—so many friends to see—so many egg-nogs to hide, and so many apple-toddies to—well, who would wonder that we should forget, for a season, the little town of with and the latter and all that is in It? well, who would wonder that we should forget, for a season, the little town of Wheeling and all that is in 1?

Of course you don't want to hear about our rounds—say to the New Year's receptions—even that of the President—which lasted from 11A. M. to 2 P. M., during which time he (the President) shook hands with an average of thirty per minute—when little Gen. Grant and staff, including his big Indian Ald, figured largely, when all the Diplomatic Corps appeared in their gayest trim and where beauffully draggled skiris (oh') it was an awful sloppy day) were a most curious sight to look upon. Those things are among the rubbish of the past, and though Patrick Henry said that he could judge of the future only by the past, yet I don't see how the recollection of these things can help us to fight understandingly the battle of life and liberty—axespt it may how the recollection of these things can help us to fight understandingly the battle of life and liberly—except it may be, that by holding on to some of the more, pleasant memories, when we are about entering upon the duties of the next Holiday, we will also remember (figuratively) the rock upon which our pleasures split (liter-ally)—where and how we got the head-ache.

ally)—where and how we got the headache.

Well, after a season of relaxation, the world is again girdling up its loins and the march for the new year is begun, Who can forstell its ending? Taken in connection with the grand finate—the mysterious, providential and sublime results—the closing of each grand chapter of universal history—no other city, on the American continent presents such an illustration of the vinity of human hopes and aspirations as does Washington. Here is the concentrated talent and ambition of the greatest nation on the face of the earth. Here are men who are called giants, grappling in the intellectual arena for supremacy, for place and power—pressing with all the energies of a long life for this of that reform, for revolution, or for some untried ideal good—vainly, alas, how vainly lin the strength of their selfconceit, believing that they control that reform, for revolution, or for some untried ideal good—vainly, alas, how vainly lin the strength of their self-conceit, believing that they control events, which are but a part of the great plan of the great first cause in the government of the universe—and they, instead of directing, are only drifting upon the current or only a particle of unheeded drift floating upon it. When the Governor of the Universe determines upon a reform, he is wise indeed who is weak enough to "accept the situation." We have seen some and read of others who had too much native ability—were too strong-minded or too arrogant and self-conceited to adapt themselves to the ebb and flow of the tide. Canute of old,—was of this school; and old Edward Ruffin of late was another examples of the strong-minded.

old, was of this school; and old Ed-ward Ruffin of late was another exam-ple of the strong-minded, who prefer to run against the "bosses of Jahovah," rather than "accept the situation" and drift with the current. Jubal Early, has also given some late symptoms of this kind of talent; and on the other side, we have many illustrious exam-ples—or rather one crowning example —of, the irresistibility of the current when God moves the waters, and of the certainty of those who, trusting in their own ability and strength, attempt to stand against if, being overwhelmed. The Democratic party-trained by long continued successe, to arrogance and to belief in their saft sumblent, setting the tide of freedom swell, but with too much self-conceit to detect the divinity which moved within it, threw themselves into the channel with the van belief that they could roll back the waves, which paid them, however, as little respect as did they the commands of Canute. The party is overwhelmed by the ocean of God's Providence. They have sunk.

"Into its depth with bubbling groan, Without's grave, unknelled, uncommend and unknown."

Wise indeed is he who can divine the

the current.

Messrs, Editors, with all that is serious and solemn, the world is full of clowns. Artemus Ward, the great showman, is dead—(may his bones rest in peace)—but he has left many greater showmen behind him—men, short-sighted-wise men, like Pope's Politician, who undergoing the test, to such an extent as to cause it to give way at a pressure of 140 pounds.

We do not accept the position as correct, however sincere they may be, for then the present method of testing boilers would not only be not beneficial, but dangerous as tending, to weaken boilers to such a degree as to cause them to give way at a much less than working pressure. We cannot conceive how this explosion occurred at a pressure of but 146 pounds, when but three days previous the boilers stood a pressure of 215 pounds as above stated, by the only correct method of determining their relative strength. A method devised by the first mechanical minds of the country and sanctioned by the combined wisdom of the nation, the advantages of which as a test principle has, we think, since its adoption been fully demonstrated. For the purpose of assisting us in determining the caused this disaster we examined the boiler as soon after the occurrence as possible, and found the third and fourth rings, together with a portion of the second, torn out, while the flues of the same, and found the third and fourth ring together with a portion of the secon torn out, while the flues of the sam and the other boiler were uninjure. The patch referred to by Mr. Faul ner and Curtis we flud to be of goi ron, and was well, put on and proycapable of resisting the working presure. We are therefore clearly of the opinion that this explosion was cause. opinion that his explosion was caused by an over-pressure of steam, and de suspend the license of Lemuel Faulk ner for the period of one year from this date, for causing the same. Respectfully submitted. Jos. S. Armstrong, HIRAM YOUNG. Local Inspectors.
